After this accident (for the horse had to be sold to pay the damages) they were obliged to lead to smoking cigars.

Last night the news of our coming having reached the village of the Pawnee Republic, they there have been many attempts from those The interpreter, who also lives at that place, was perfected over this evening. This afternoon the old chief will visit us in camp. As soon as I have arrived at the foot of this sheet, I will receive for the meat chapter the amount of that and fifty other things, I have not time to speak of here. WHIG MEETING.

The Whigs of the City of Bangor, are requested to meet at the CITY HALL, on SATURDAY EVENING next, at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Mayor—to choose a City Committee for the ensuing year, and to transact any other business that may properly come before the meeting.

Per order of City Committee.

Bangor, March, 4, 1845.

WARD CAUCUSES.

The Whigs of the several Wards in the City of Bangor, are requested to meet at the usual places of Ward Meetings, on FRIDAY EVENING next, at 7 o'clock, to nominate candidates for Ward Officers.

Per order of City Committee.

Bangor, March 5, 1845.

☞ There seems to be a variety of issues, as usual, getting up in the election every officer, particularly of Mayor. There are many who wish to keep up the usual organizations of political parties in the Municipal election, while there are a few in each political party who will not vote for their party candidate, unless he agrees with them on the subject of licensing, or upon the subject of building a City Hall, or what changes should be made in the subordinate officers of the city, and other questions of more or less importance.

The fact that with many persons these special questions, particularly that of licensing, is stronger than party ties, has caused all parties to nominate as to the propriety of party nominations against these contradictory purposes, in which those interest man goes on his own hook.

Our own opinion is that the Whig Committee should, in accordance with customary usage, call a meeting of the Whigs, and let them decide upon the propriety of making a nomination for Mayor. We think such a meeting would meet the general response of the Whigs, and that less difficulty would be experienced in electing a Mayor and other city officers by nominations through Whig caucuses than in any other way.

☞ The sudden and strange effects produced upon the minds and in the conduct of the receivers of the Miller theories may justly be ranked among the curiosities of the times. Many of the accounts which we hear and some of which have been solemnly verified under oath, are not fitting to appear in our columns, but are nevertheless, producing much real mischief in the community.

There are instances however which are worthy of being recorded. Of this kind is the following—An industrious farmer, living in Orrington, who has for several years, supplied customers in this city with milk and who has been noted for his closeness in pecuniary matters and for real in accumulating property, has recently changed his whole course of life. It appears that one of his family experienced what was called a vision, when it was revealed that the man was too avaricious, and instead of devoting himself to labor and the acquisition of property should abandon selling milk and give all he possessed to the poor and make earnest preparation for the immediate end of the world. He has not since waited upon his customers, has abandoned labor and is now as profuse and lavish in his gifts as he was ever close and sparing.

There seems to be a general design among the advent movers to collect together in some interior town in this State, we believe it is at Atkinson, and there be ready together to meet their Lord, at this coming, to take vengeance on his enemies.

Prosecutions and guardianships have been resorted to in several places, but so far, we believe, without any best final effects.

☞ The Liberty party held a caucus at Dow's Hall on Monday evening for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Mayor. After nominating four persons, neither of whom would accept, and coming within one vote of nominating another, the meeting adjourned to Saturday evening.

In Switzerland, persons accused of crimes and acquitted, are indemnified for the trouble and expense to which they have been subjected—but in a regulation it takes place, would not be worthy in little here.

TEXAS ANNEXED—AND NO MISTAKE.

On Thursday evening, the U. S. Senate came to a direct vote on the Annexation of Texas. The question was on the passage of the House resolution, with an amendment offered by Mr Walker of Miss. which, in sound, not in the effect, is that the Territory of such have power to decide whether it will be a Slave or Free State. The House resolution, as Gen. Benton's Time was more rare to "open for Hamlet of Old Benton and the other "Democratic" democratic Senators, and amounts to just nothing at all, as the Free Soil Whigs well known to be in favor of the resolves of the House.

This that I like guess is therefore not merely conceptual, but it allows the movements to the whole plot, and furnishes at the key to the mysteries that have been made in order to induce the recreant Democratic Senators to violate the pledges they have made over and again to the country. The Amendment and the Resolves passed by precisely the same vote—27 to 25. Bagby of Ala, notwithstanding he denounced the measure as "unconstitutional" only twenty four hours previously, and declared that, "late as this, sink or swim," he would stand by "the constitution, never to leave abandoned his scruples, and swallowed the entire dose, omitted, hooks and all."

The Resolves, as amended, were sent back to the House, and on Friday morning concurred in by the extraordinary majority of 132 to 76 nearly all the locos who had previously voted against them, now voted in their favor!

The following is the Senate's amendment to the joint resolution of the House.

And be it further enacted, That if the President of the United States shall, in this judgment and discretion, deem it most advisable, instead of proceeding to submit the foregoing resolution to the Republic of Texas as an overture on the United States for admission, to negotiate with that Republic [illegible]—

Be it resolved, That a State, to be formed out of the present Republic of Texas, with suitable extent and boundaries, and with two Representatives in Congress, until the next apportionment of representation, shall be admitted into the Union by virtue of this act on an equal footing with the existing States as soon as the terms and conditions of such admission, and the assent of the remaining Texan territory to the United States shall be agreed upon by the Governments of Texas and United States.

Sec 2. And be it further enacted, That the sum of one hundred thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to defray the expenses of missions and negotiations to agree upon the terms of said admission and cession, either by treaty to be submitted to the Senate, or by articles to be submitted to the two Houses of Congress, as the President may direct.

The first resolution of the House with the above amendment, passed the Senate by the following vote:

Yeas—Messrs Allen, Ashley, Atchinson, Atherton, Bagby, Benton, Breese, Buchanan, Calhoun, Dickinson, Dix, Fairfield, Huntington, Hayward, Hendricks, Huger, Johnson, Lewis, Mc Duffie, Merrick, Niles, Pearce, Sevier, Simmons, Tappan, Walker, Woodbury—27.

Nays—Messrs. Archer, Barrow, Bates, Bayard, Berrien, Conrad, Clayton, Crittenden, Dayton, Evans, Foster, Francis, Huntington, Jarnigan, Mangum, Miller, Morehead, Pearce, Phelps, Porter, Rives, Simmons, Upham, Wall, Woodbridge—25

☞ The New York Sun states that Elder Darling Huntress, of Bogotan, Me, left home last October, on a visit to Pennsylvania, with the hope of improving his health by traveling. He had with him between $800 and $900 in money. He spends, being from him by letter dated in Boston, stating that his health was fast failing and that he had left his property in the hands of his good friend Mr Loughey, Soon after a letter dated New York Nov 15 appeared in the Star Newspaper, Dover, N H, addressed to the editor, signed by J. Loughey, giving an account of Elder Huntress' death, which was said to have taken place at New York on the 8th of November. After repeated attempts to ascertain the facts of the case by letter forwarded through the Post office, a relative of Elder Huntress proceeded to New York but had failed to find Mr Loughey or any one who knew of the death of the Elder

☞ The locos burnt some powder yesterday in the city, on the occasion of the incoming of the new administration. The locos rejoiced that their party had come fully into power, and the whigs could not feel that rejoicing on account of the termination of the disgraceful administration of John Tyler was much out of place.

We have no confidence in the ability or integrity of the incoming administration not so much on account of the men at the head of affairs as the radical and ruinous tendency of loco focoism generally. With such unscrupulous leaders as control that party we cannot feel that the country is safe or that our institutions are likely to be preserved or the peace of the country maintained or the welfare of the people promoted.

☞ Elisha Case Esq., has disposed of his interest in the Eastern Argus to Mr O. L. Sanborn one of the firm of Sanborn & Carter editors & book publishers and stationers. Mr Sanborn is to be known in the establishment as business manager and not as an editor. Mr Holden remains in the establishment and the Argus will be conducted by the firm of Holden & Sanborn. Mr Holden having the general superintendance of the editorial.

Mr Case has been in the Stock business years and has taken a leading stand in his party and maintained his position with much ability and address. He is where accurately attached by his own party editors. We do not like his politics but in all other respects he has maintained an honorable position.

☞ Hon. Luther Severance in his editorial letter to the Kennebec Journal, in speaking of the Annexation by an act of Congress, says that Repeal should be the word of the people. Repeal the wicked act. Retrace our steps. Let the people speak out every where. If a foreign nation can be added to our own, by an act of Congress, then the two can be separated in like manner, for any act of Congress can be repealed. Regarding the admission of Texas in this mere, as a plain violation of the Constitution, neither the States nor the people should unlimit, but unite their strength to repeal the obnoxious act. It is true only that the national good faith and the peace of the country can be preserved.

We like that. Repeal is the word and if Congress persists in annexing a foreign nation by a resolution we shall gladly aid the people in resolving upon a Repeal.

The Democratic Party and Corporations.

The Democratic party of the present day is indicted very much for its success. Not accordency to the fitness with which its advocates accommodate themselves to every fluctuation of public sentiment. Professing always to be governed by immutable principle and to change never, it is itself constantly changing and varying its action in conformity with the popular impulses. In past history, going back as far as General Jackson's first administration, we can trace this remark. Its leading men have at times, at one time, and opposed to another, after nearly all the great measures of public policy which have been before the country and agitated the public mind. It has nothing in common with the republican faith and practice of the democracy of the days of Jefferson and Madison, but the name, which it has rigidly assumed and perverted to the vilest uses. The republican party of '76 and '16 is in principle and action, essentially correct, and its leading supporters were consistent, talented, intelligent and honest; but the modern democracy is a complicated mass of politicians, with no common principles—no uniform faith, and with but one object—which may be summed up in the one word, Office, and the whole upon the democracy, as understood and practiced by our republican fathers, to say that it had any resemblance to modern democracy, would be a libel upon the democracy, as understood and practiced by our republican fathers, to say that it had any resemblance to modern democracy. The leading feature of modern democracy is its fickleness, and the disposition which is always ready to sacrifice principle to the influence of changes in public sentiment. In illustration of this we would point to the action of the present legislature in granting acts of incorporation, in direct violation of their faith, and the party in its legislative action for several years, have kept steadily in view, very much to the detriment of the State, this principle. The Whigs, who thought differently, believed it sound policy to grant, under proper restrictions, acts of incorporation, were denounced as aristocrats, monopolists—in favor of building up the rich, and oppressing the poor, and charged with a desire to trespass upon individual rights. All corporations were monopolies, and every privilege granted a citizen was a right wrested from the body of the people. A constant hue and cry was kept up by them against all those who proposed to give a State policy adopted, having for its object the development of the resources of the State. In 1842 and 1843, mobility to corporations was the touchstone of democratic faith. The Legislatures of these years were governed altogether by the narrow, illiberal views of the radicals who were then in the party days of prosperity. But a wonderful change has come over the democracy—the old land marks are obliterated—the party is in power, and it was a few years ago—the old order of things is shattered, and a new one established. The present legislature, approaching the close of last year, when there was a partial abandonment of radical doctrines, is now as generous as could be wished. It has granted nearly every act of incorporation asked for, and in all cases has been much more liberal in its grants. The leaders of the democracy whose mouths were so short time ago full of bitterness, are now eloquent in their praises of corporations—have forgotten they were once monopolies, and now nothing the Whig party in supporting them.

We have never known, upon so radical a change as has been effected, any outcry from the democratic ranks. Indeed so zealous, are those new converts in supporting their new faith, that they will not allow their political name to be, who, out of regard to their own consistency, cannot defend the principles of democracy, but understand a few years since and do remind them of their departure without questioning the honesty of their motives.

But there is one thing in the course of these new converts, which we confess we cannot understand, and which surprises us. Instead of wondering at their former folly, and deploring the part, as all sincere converts should, we find them taking as flippantly as ever the old democratic principles, and old federalism, as every, and even going so far as to assert in the most positive manner that it was always democratic to support corporations, and that the wicked Whigs have battled against them, and that they are, notwithstanding, the old champions of democracy, the radicals, are constantly reminding them of their error, and accusing them of having imbibed federal principles, and of being worse than the "federalists in supporting federal measures.

But we give them very little credit for their change. If they were really sincere—truly penitent—they would evince some contrition for their former folly, and perilous abuse of the associates, or endeavor to take from their former opponents, with whom they are now found acting in these matters, the credit of the measures which they now support. In our opinion, it is the force of public sentiment, which they dare not resist, which has induced the democrats to change its position. They mean to be on the popular side. In obedience to the grand feature of modern democracy they mean to act with the popular impulses. We have never yet found the leaders of this party to act from honest motives, and we have seen too much of their hollow insincerity and variableness to believe them now sincere. It is the popular breeze they are after, and not at year, should it blow from south to north, they will veer about and from their association other way with as little regard to consistency as the vane on a weather house.

Nevertheless the State, we trust, is to be a gainer, in the new plan of management. Corporations will be forced to the popular side, and into a sincere and revulsion in public sentiment, we have reason that its pressure will be strong enough to induce the party to give full vent to the spirit of corporations, and to the spirit of enterprise, the spirit of the State. We believe that the party day is dawning upon us, and although we have little faith or confidence in the party which is now in the ascendancy, office is a powerful stimulant which the party will have the hardihood to despise or resist. The people are beginning to understand their true interest, and, irrespective of party, are demanding of their public servants obedience to their wishes, and the utter, entire, and lasting abandonment of those radical notions which have retarded the prosperity and crippled the energies of the State. We feel confident, that, no matter what party is nominally in the ascendancy, who has the offices, Whig measures, and Whig policy will be pursued in the administration of the affairs of the State. The people are prompt to demand that our political friends might be invested with power, and indeed we wish it were so, and shall labor to place them in power, but at the same time, if their principles are in the ascendant, if the views of State policy are carried out, although it may be by our opponents, we trust all honest, sincere Whigs will rejoice and the peace of the country can be preserved.

☞ The complaints come as thick and fast from some of our subscribers on the Square, on account of their papers being stolen that we have about concluded to commence prosecutions against those persons guilty in the matter. We suffer much, and our subscribers are greatly annoyed, by borrowers and sponges, but this greediness for papers that leads to outright stealing, even by drawing them through the crack of a door with a knife, is really intolerable.
